A Home for the Wounded Heart

As in the case of Jesus himself, some of the Church's teachings are perceived to be "hard sayings" which challenge those who hear them. This is particularly true of many of her teachings in the area of marriage and sexuality such as those dealing with divorced and remarried persons or people dealing with same sex attraction. How can these teachings be heard as invitations to life and healing? Doing so requires an understanding of the priority of the encounter with Christ, the pastoral nature of the Church and the family which is the domestic church, the gradual and progressive nature of the healing effected through conversion, and the friendship and support offered by authentic Christian community in and outside of the family.
